Biddeford Cultural and Heritage Center (BCHC) Is Live

On January 30, 2018, the Biddeford Cultural and Heritage Center announced they are live.

The Biddeford Cultural and Heritage Center (BCHC) is a non-profit 501(c)3 organization where the community can explore, learn and share information on Biddeford culture, heritage and history. As a coalition, it is a vital connector between different groups in the community "celebrating all that makes our city great."

"The organization has been the dream of the organization's President, Diane Cyr, to preserve the vital oral history and heritage that is lost every day in Biddeford," said Alan Casavant, Mayor of Biddeford. "It's exciting to have a place where the community can explore, learn and share information about our rich, 400-year heritage."

BCHC will be an important place where the community can learn about their cultures, heritage and history first-hand. BCHC is seeking volunteers who want to help them in their quest to preserve, celebrate and promote Biddeford history, culture and heritage (weaving together the fabric of our ethnic quilt).
